

ABSTRACT

According to an aspect of the present invention, the expensive RAM is replaced by a low cost flash memory, wherein a space in the flash memory is defined to serve as a buffer of an electrical appliance. Thus, the cost of the electrical appliance can be effectively reduced. Furthermore, output/input terminal for connecting RAM to the microprocessor can also be avoided, which would further reduce the cost of the electrical appliance.